GODLY PARENTING – Part 5

By Chuck Wyeth

Your Home Has A Climate

Every home has a climate. Not the temperature on the thermostat, but the atmosphere created by the attitudes, words, and action that fill the home each day.

Children do not simply grow up in a house; they grow up in an environment. If yelling becomes normal, they learn yelling. If tension becomes normal, they learn anxiety. If peace becomes normal, they learn security.

Paul reminds us in Ephesians 6:4, “Do not provoke your children to wrath, but bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord.”

God calls parents to create homes where children are guided, encouraged, and loved. None of us are perfect parents. I know I am not. But with God’s help, small scratches can be repaired before they become deep wounds.

As we grow in patience, grace, and self-control, the atmosphere of our homes begins to change. When parents change, the atmosphere changes.

Challenge Question:

What kind of environment are your children learning to live in each day?

Prayer:

“Lord, make my home a refuge, not a battlefield.”
